Kaisermutt Translation Notes

I haven't translated a chapter in SEVEN FUCKING MONTHS and you fuckers still regularly join my discord server and ask if I've dropped this. This is still my lowest priority manga.

For good morning Murakami says グッモーニン (gu?moonin, I interpret the prenasal sokuon as a glottal stop) which is what you'd have a vocaloid say if you want them to good morning. Still weird seeing prenasal sokuon.

The liveliness they talk about on page 10 is キラキラ (kirakira, like Kirari)

On page 12 Connie is talking in English which I think is weird because isn't she Japanese or Irish or something.

Go read Baha Muko Sensei. It's a good manga. I translate it.

I stooped to hortizontally aligned vertical text for the two page spread from page 26 to page 27 ("love"). My dearest apologies. It just felt wrong having those words be small because the lettering in the original on that page was fucking big.

In "happy fever time for your brain" the only part that wasn't an english loan was brain, that was more transliteration than translation.

Don't ask when the next chapter will come. I'm in no rush to catch up because the manga is already coming out at a snail's pace.

I normally try to translate puns but that four pronged 愛 pun was just too much for me.
